

Wide Ruins Aquarium Part of Replacement School Project

For nearly a decade, Wide Ruins Community School students have helped care for fish in a large fresh water aquarium set up in the classroom building hallway. The replacement project now under construction for the K-6 school in Arizona will include a location for the tank.
Video: OFMC Project Manager Andy Acoya talks about the aquarium.

JFK Day School Gets New Doors

Teddy Guy, a facilities maintenance worker at John F. Kennedy Day School in Whiteriver, Ariz., shows some of the school's new doors, funded by an OFMC Minor Improvement & Repair project. Like many other BIE schools, doors at John F. Kennedy Day School wear out and need replacing because more than 200 students, mostly members of the White Mountain Apache Tribe, use them many times a day at the K-8 school, which is located on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation.

OFMC Managers Review MAXIMO

OFMC project managers gathered in February to create requirements for the Project Management Module in MAXIMO. As OFMC transitions from FMIS to MAXIMO for asset management and work orders, there is a need to upgrade FMIS's legacy functionality regarding project management in MAXIMO.